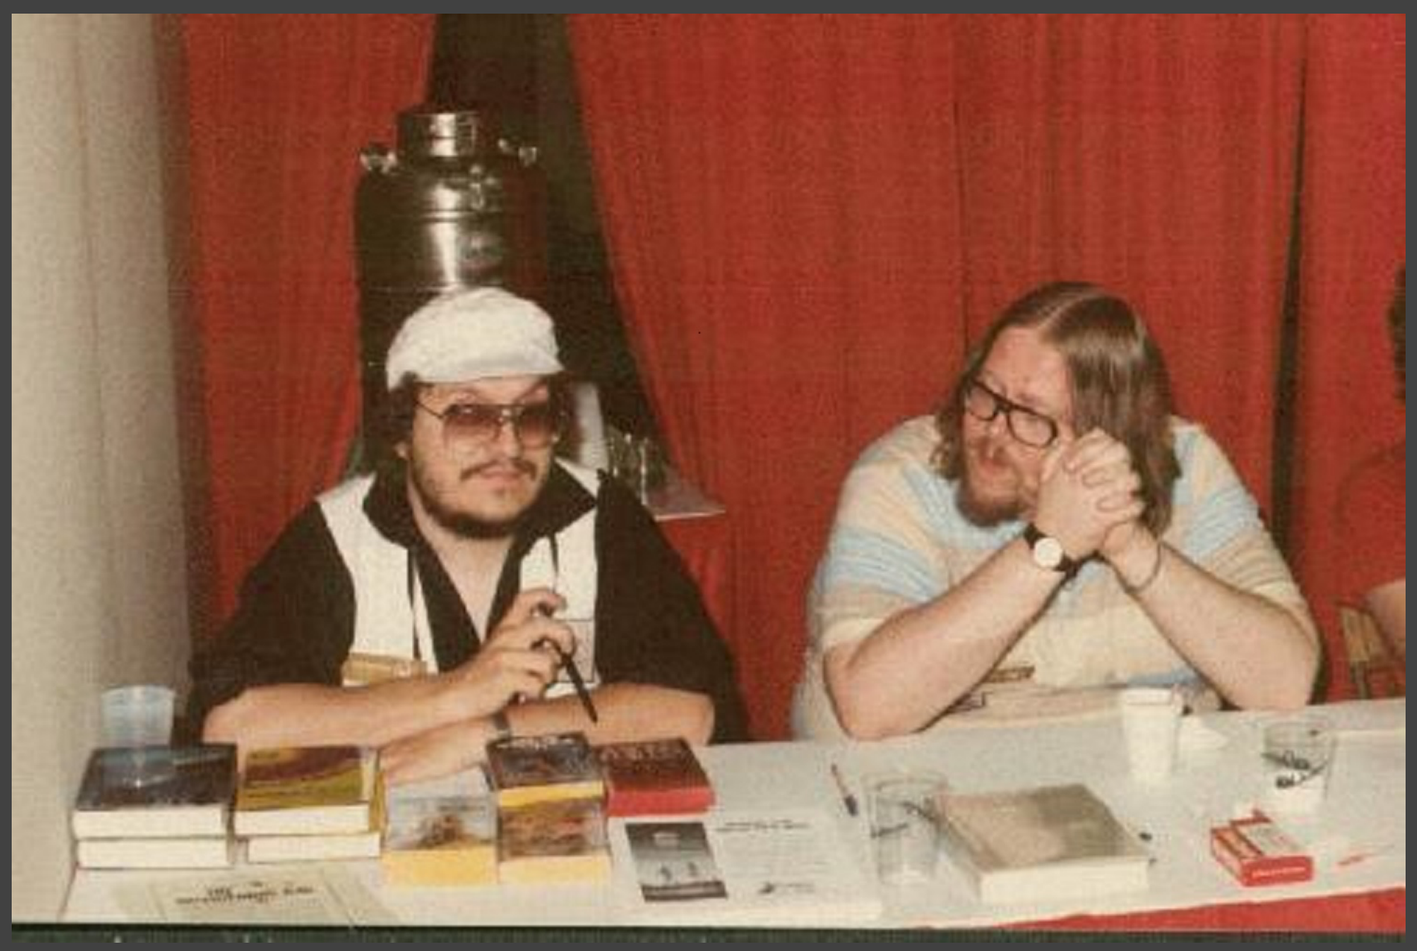
Hugo Recommendations – Editing (Redux)

FEBRUARY 2, 2019 AT 8:09 PM

For Best Editor, Short Form:

GARDNER DOZOIS

Of course.



We lost Gardner last May. A lot of love and laughter went out of the world when he died, and a tremendous amount of talent as well. He was a gifted writer who did not write nearly enough… and an amazing editor, the single most important and influential editor in our field since John W. Campbell Jr. It was my privilege to co-edit half a dozen anthologies with him. That was a joy and a pleasure, and I will always regret that we can't do any more.

I think they should offer their 1st rounder to the Cardinals for Rosen and a 2nd rounder in return. Fixes a lot of problems for both teams and it still leaves them with a great pick along with picking up a previously top 10 drafted QB to sit under Eli for a year.

Giants are sounding like the Ottawa Senators of the NHL, what with trading away all the best players around whom they should build for a roll of the dice on picks. Doesn't help the owner has a streak of atrocious public messaging, is chronically in debt, and is WAY too over-involved in the operations of the team. I feel you on the incredulity of the tire fire that is one's chosen team. It's a particular folly.

Rumors are flying that the Cardinals will select Kyler Murray with the 1st pick overall. In that scenario, would you be for the Giants trading for Josh Rosen with the 2nd or 3rd round pick?

Also, would you want the Jets to give a big contract to Levon Bell?

Be well and good luck.

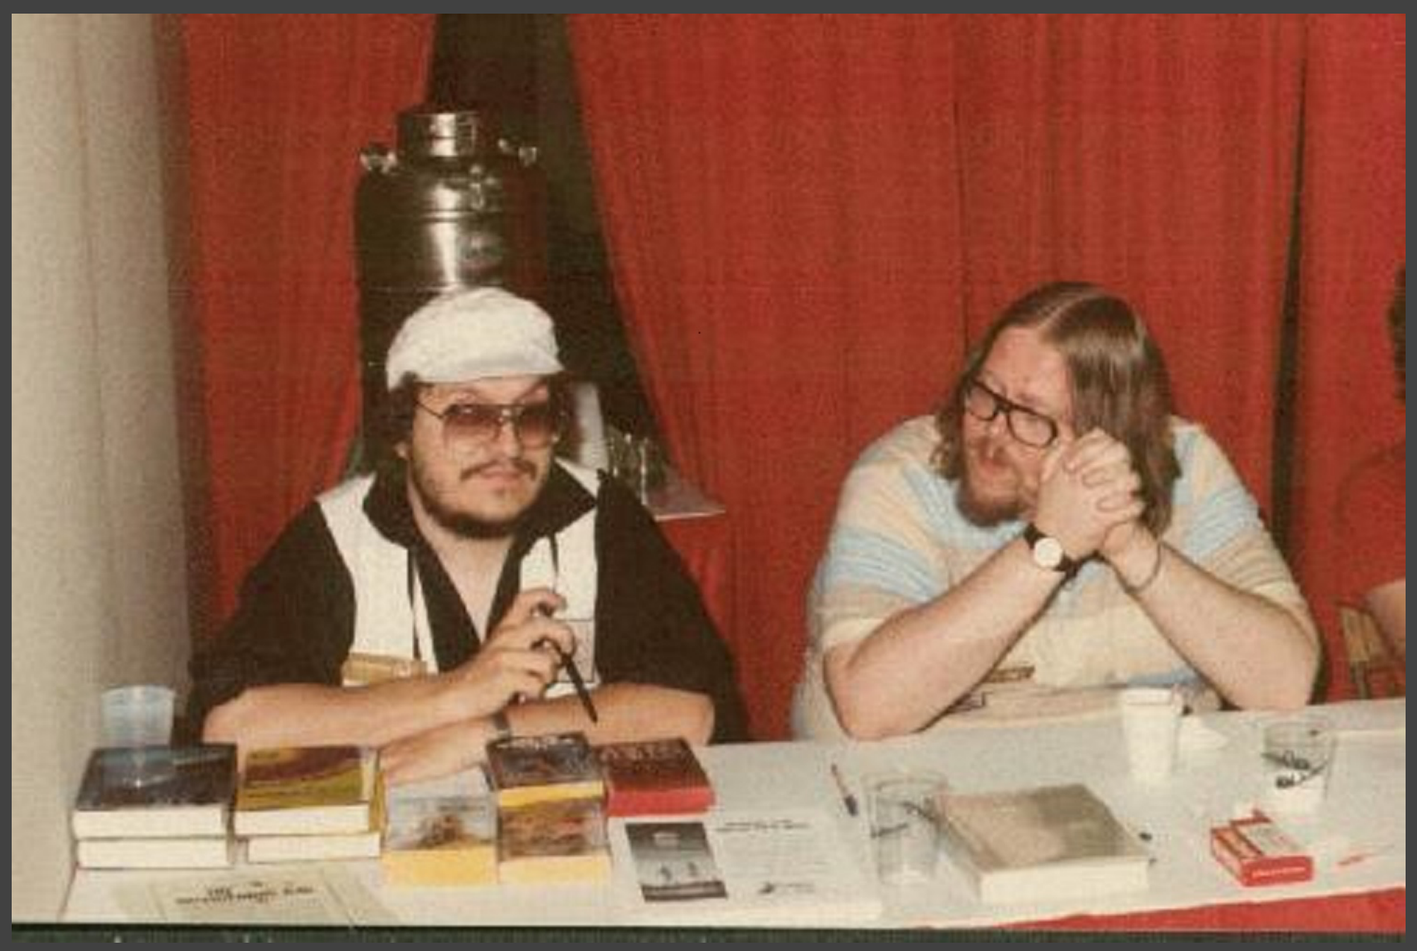
Hugo Recommendations – Editing (Redux)

FEBRUARY 2, 2019 AT 8:09 PM

For Best Editor, Short Form:

GARDNER DOZOIS

Of course.



We lost Gardner last May. A lot of love and laughter went out of the world when he died, and a tremendous amount of talent as well. He was a gifted writer who did not write nearly enough… and an amazing editor, the single most important and influential editor in our field since John W. Campbell Jr. It was my privilege to co-edit half a dozen anthologies with him. That was a joy and a pleasure, and I will always regret that we can't do any more.

Gardner loved science fiction with all his heart and soul, and the field loved him as well. He won more Hugos for editing than any other editor, past or present. But that does not mean we cannot give him one more. THE BOOK OF MAGIC, his last original anthology, was published in 2018, along with the final volume of his annual BEST. Great works, both.

I'll be putting Gardner's name on my ballot for Best Editor, Short Form. I hope you will as well.

Rumors are flying that the Cardinals will select Kyler Murray with the 1st pick overall. In that scenario, would you be for the Giants trading for Josh Rosen with the 2nd or 3rd round pick?

Also, would you want the Jets to give a big contract to Levon Bell?

Be well and good luck.

I think they should offer their 1st rounder to the Cardinals for Rosen and a 2nd rounder in return. Fixes a lot of problems for both teams and it still leaves them with a great pick along with picking up a previously top 10 drafted QB to sit under Eli for a year.

Giants are sounding like the Ottawa Senators of the NHL, what with trading away all the best players around whom they should build for a roll of the dice on picks. Doesn't help the owner has a streak of atrocious public messaging, is chronically in debt, and is WAY too over-involved in the operations of the team. I feel you on the incredulity of the tire fire that is one's chosen team. It's a particular folly.

For Best Editor, Short Form:

GARDNER DOZOIS

Of course.

We lost Gardner last May. A lot of love l a tremendous amount of talent as well. He was a gifted writer who did not write nearly enough… and a uential editor in our field since John W. Campbell Jr. It was my privilege to co-edit half a dozen antholo vill always regret that we can't do any more.

Gardner loved science fiction with all his won more Hugos for editing than any other editor, past or present. But that does not mean we can last original anthology, was published in 2018, along with the final volume of his annual BEST. Great

I'll be putting Gardner's name on my ball ll.

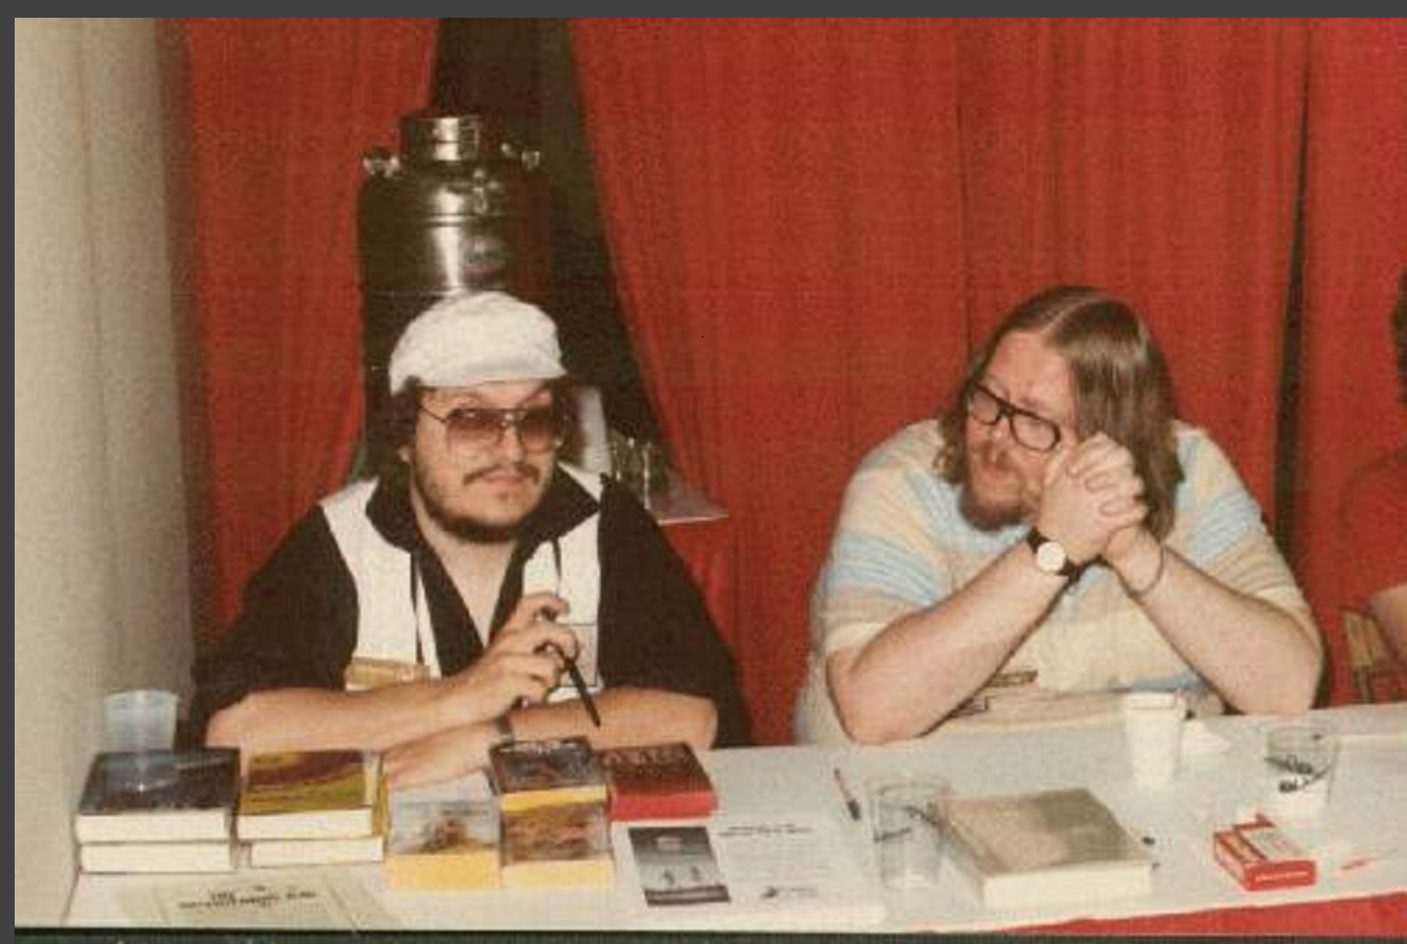
Of course.



We lost Gardner last May. A lot of love and laughter went out of the world when he died, and a tremendous amount of talent as well. He was a gifted writer who did not write nearly enough… and an amazing editor, the single most important and influential editor in our field since John W. Campbell Jr. It was my privilege to co-edit half a dozen anthologies with him. That was a joy and a pleasure, and I will always regret that we can't do any more.

Gardner loved science fiction with all his heart and soul, and the field loved him as well. He won more Hugos for editing than any other editor, past or present. But that does not mean we cannot give him one more. THE BOOK OF MAGIC, his last original anthology, was published in 2018, along with the final volume of his annual BEST. Great works, both.

I'll be putting Gardner's name on my ballot for Best Editor, Short Form. I hope you will as well.

Rumors are flying that the Cardinals wil scenario, would you be for the Giants trading for Josh Rosen with the 2nd or 3rd round pick?

Also, would you want the Jets to give a big contract to Levon Bell?

Be well and good luck.

I think they should offer their 1st rounder to the Cardinals for Rosen and a 2nd rounder in return. Fixes a lot of problems for both teams and it still leaves them with a great pick along with picking up a previously top 10 drafted QB to sit under Eli for a year.

Giants are sounding like the Ottawa Senators of the NHL, what with trading away all the best players around whom they should build for a roll of the dice on picks. Doesn't help the owner has a streak of atrocious public messaging, is chronically in debt, and is WAY too over-involved in the operations of the team. I feel you on the incredulity of the tire fire that is one's chosen team. It's a particular folly.
